Description This subject focuses on music therapy professional practice issues including ethics, standards of practice, starting a music therapy business, developing new music therapy positions, working within the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) and working within interprofessional workplaces. Of equal focus is the further development of research knowledge with an emphasis on research proposal development as relevant to applied music therapy practice across a wide range of settings. Students are engaged in further developing reflective practice and critical thinking skills for effective music therapy practice. The principles of self-care and supervision for music therapy practitioners and students are re-visited within this subject in preparation for completion of the Master of Creative Music Therapy, and graduation as a career-ready music therapist.
