Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this subject, students should be able to:

1. Demonstrate a clear understanding of: legal professional ethics; proper legal professional practice; and correct legal professional behaviour.
2. Demonstrate the essential requirements of good advocacy in general, and in particular and differing contexts: eg. the difference between conducting bail pending hearing and conducting an appeal in an appellate court.
3. Take up any case and analyse it succinctly, logically and accurately: the relevant facts; the relevant legal principles; and the intelligent application of the principles to the facts.
4. Present the oral distillation of a case analysis in a polite, polished and persuasive fashion.
5. Think quickly and adapt flexibly according to changing circumstances while engaged in presenting an oral argument.
6. Be aware of any relevant aspect of legal professional ethics and be at once able to mould any desired submission so as to accord strictly with that ethical aspect.
7. Present written submissions and analyses in a logically structured and grammatically correct manner.
8. Demonstrate a ready understanding and an intelligent acceptance of the nature of advocacy skills.
