Description This subject uses comparative analysis of different disaster responses to provide students with the skills and knowledge required to play a role in future emergency and disaster management. Students will gain critical understanding of key international frameworks and standards that shape humanitarian responses, the motivations of aid donors and humanitarian NGOs and the increasing efforts to empower local communities with Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR) and response capabilities. Drawing on theoretical models of disaster management and planning, students work to resolve practical challenges of field-level humanitarian response while balancing resource constraints and the needs of multiple stakeholder groups.
