Description The cultures and intellectual life of Ancient Greece and Rome influenced European life and thought for much of the succeeding two thousand years. But the greatest influence came with the 'classical revival' of the 1400s through to the 1700s, beginning with the 'Renaissance'. This subject outlines several key themes in Ancient Culture: moral and political philosophy, literature, history, and rhetoric and the art of speaking. It then traces the later careers and revivals of these themes in the period 1400-1700.
