Description The aim of this first practice education subject is to introduce Master of Social Work (Qualifying) students to social work practice through experiential learning, building upon their undergraduate qualifications to facilitate the development of foundational practice knowledge and skills, and beginning professional identity formation. This subject enables students to develop beginner level skills and knowledge of social work processes in the context of a supervised placement experience, drawing on their existing academic foundation to transition into professional practice. This subject provides the opportunity for students to integrate their theoretical knowledge of social work with practical application. Learning is informed by the AASW Practice Standards (2023) and the AASW Code of Ethics (2020). Placements will be offered in direct, indirect or mixed service work with a wide range of service user groups and communities across the human services sector. Students are required to complete a total of 400 hours of placement, inclusive of three integrated seminars and two peer practice group meetings, in accordance with the accreditation requirements of the Australian Association of Social Workers (AASW).
